This is our 40th anniversary and the two hundred and first newsletter of the St Kilda Historical Society.

This edition is dedicated to:-

- ◆ the concerned people who established our society back in the 1970s (see insert);
- ◆ the members who keep it going through renewing their annual subscriptions year after year;
- ◆ the committee members and volunteers who have contributed their time and effort over four decades;
- ◆ our local government staff and elected councilors who support the society in many tangible and intangible ways;
- ◆ St Kilda Library staff who assist us with innumerable aspects;
- ◆ the broader community whose rates and taxes help sustain SKHS.

SKHS thanks you all.

Do contact us if you have a suggestion as to how we might mark our 40th year.

VALE

Betty Irvine

SKHS is deeply saddened that Betty Irvine, one of our veteran members and a community activist, passed away in the Caulfield Hospital on February 2, 2010.

Since Betty joined SKHS in 1973 she touched the lives of so many of us, and she will always be remembered with affection.

SKHSTURNS 40

The inaugural meeting of the Historical Society of St Kilda (HSoSK) took place on Monday, April 5, 1970 in the doomed Grand Junction Hotel, cnr Barkly & High Sts — after an interim committee, headed by Lance Fryer, called for a public meeting.

Prior to this, MMBW planners had announced their intention to demolish the Junction Hotel plus 150 shops and buildings in High St for a multi-lane roadway through the middle of St Kilda.

MMBW's aim was to facilitate the flow of private transport to and from the central city and the fast developing low density outer suburbs.

Conversely, the new roadway would drive a wedge between east and west St Kilda (Encyclopaedia of Melbourne) and virtually destroy its then commercial and retail heart.

SKHS AIM

SKHS was mainly established to help raise awareness of, and document St Kilda's fast-disappearing heritage after Queens Rd was reconstructed (completed 1968).

Two other proposed freeways thru St Kilda in 1970s

[red arrow & roundabout inserted by St Kilda Times]

Reproduced from Longmire, A., Plate 13

The massive Queen's Rd project demolished one hundred and fifty six residences, fifty two business premises, forty two shops, three service stations and three hotels (Longmire, p200).

To cater for our love affair with the motor car, four lanes and a six-lane link to Dandenong Rd were also constructed under St Kilda Junction with tramlines diverted from Wellington St.

To its credit, MMBW did realign Queens Rd to preserve the Corroboree Tree* saved in 1952 by the VIC Field Naturalists Club.

After more community and local government opposition, two other proposed freeways (sketch above) slated to rip thru St Kilda were dropped in 1973 (Longmire).

According to the Port Phillip Leader, Sept 2008, some 65,000 vehicles drive through the Junction daily. Ironically, one of the main entrances to Port Phillip City and the Mornington Peninsula is the scene of many, if not most, car accidents/prangs in Melbourne.

*Does anyone happen to know of a safe pedestrian route from the Junction tramstop to the Corroboree Tree?

ST KILDA LIVE & LOCAL

As part of the recent St Kilda Festival's Live N Local, State MP Martin Foley launched Heritage Victoria's free MP3 audio walking tour [created with some input from SKHS] about the domestic architecture and changing fortunes of St Kilda. (Copy of their brochure inside)

Narrated by Peter Mares from ABC Radio National, the tour guides us through some St Kilda streets that show how our history is captured in bricks and mortar.

Mayor of Port Phillip, Cr Frank O'Connor, Cr Serge Thoman and a panel of local residents including Peter Mares, Peter Johnson, President St Kilda Historical Society, Alex Njoo and Carmel Shute also participated in the launch at the Street Café, once the dining room of Summerland Mansions, and one of the landmarks featured in the podcast.

ARCHIVES

Our small but dedicated archival team have now catalogued 1753 items, objects, memorabilia and ephemera as well as 680 photographs.
As the catalogued items will have to be entered into our data base, we are asking members, who have a few hours to spare on a Thursday morning, to think about helping us. Ring Dorothy on 9537 1967.
Some of the images and objects relating to St Kilda during WW1 will be included in the Pre-ANZAC Day Display in St Kilda Library accompanying Maureen Walker's talk 6.30pm, Thursday, April 22. (See last

COMMITTEE

Lack of time and too many other commitments have forced Carole Stals to resign from the SKHS committee.
Fortunately, she will continue as SKHS exhibitions' officer and organise three St Kilda-themed displays per year in the showcase, St Kilda Library Foyer.
The committee thanks her for all the time and effort she put in over the past few years. We will greatly miss her input and feedback as well as her vivacity, at our meetings.

SUGGESTIONS (refer Issue No 200)

Of the three suggestions/ideas printed for comment in our last issue, only one — "consider altering St Kilda Historical Society to St Kilda Heritage Society or Group" — elicited responses, with a small majority favouring the status quo.
SKHS Committee thanks all the members who contacted us verbally and by email.

SKHS Creative Arts Awards 2009

"Today is Tomorrow's History"

Since 2006, with support from the City of Port Phillip, "Today is Tomorrow's History" has been the theme of the SKHS sponsored Annual Creative Arts Awards incorporating the Don Taggart Memorial Prize of $500.

To express the theme and encourage school children engage with their local community and area, SKHS Committee chose photography as the medium for 2009.

Then SKHS president, Meyer Eidelson invited Grade 4 children attending Ripponlea Primary School to participate.

OUTSTANDING

Once again, as she has since 2006, Carol Stals, SKHS exhibitions' officer, put in a lot of work behind the scenes as did Ripponlea art teacher, Kate Ashforth.

SKHS rated eleven submissions (reproduced on right) as the most engaging, outstanding or deserving of special mention.

Each of the eleven entrants received prize money of $25 organised by acting treasurer, Dorothy Lobert, with the school receiving the balance for its arts program.

SUGGESTIONS

With the advent of a new decade, SKHS Committee are working on re-focusing the SKHS Creative Arts Awards towards SKHS members and their families as well as benefitting the wider community.

SKHS committee seeks members' ideas and suggestions.

The originals of the award-winning images reproduced below and the other entries from Ripponlea Primary School will be displayed by the Glen Eira Road Traders Association during their inaugural Ripponlea Fiesta, mid-March 2010.

Meyer Eidelson will be conducting heritage walks, sponsored by Port Phillip City, in the precinct during the Fiesta. Bookings: walking@portphillip.vic.gov.au or phone the Port Phillip City walk line 9209 6522. Suitable for families with prizes for children.

Turn to P 7 for other heritage walks in Port Phillip City during 2010.

SKHS Online Book

ST. KILDA: THE SHOW GOES ON

“The publishing of an online version of the three volumes of The History of St Kilda 1840 –1983 has long been a cherished dream of the St Kilda Historical Society. This milestone project enables free and efficient access to the only comprehensive written record of St Kilda’s early history and heritage. Equally important are the outstanding photos and illustrations.

The general reader, historian, student, researcher and journalist will reap the benefits of this collaborative work completed with support from SKHS members, the Victorian Government through the Community Support Fund, the Public Record Office, Port Phillip City and publishing consultant, John Hulskamp and Associates.”

The Show Goes On

With support from Port Phillip City, SKHS is currently preparing the electronic version of Volume 111 of the History of St Kilda titled: St Kilda, The Show Goes On, The History of St Kilda, Volume 111, 1930–1983 by Anne Longmire.

We expect it to be available on our website by SKHS’ 40th anniversary, April 5, 2010 and it will be accessible free of charge to the public.

ump to www.vcnet.net.au/~hsosk, click online publications.

Volume 111, originally published in 1989, ends just as council management was restructured from a Town Clerk situation to a City Manager in 1983.

Longmire’s work, closes with the words:

“The curtain now falls on Volume III ... It will be the task of another historian to record the outcome of this and so many other uncertainties in Volume IV of the history of St. Kilda.”

Volume IV from 1983 onwards is yet to be written

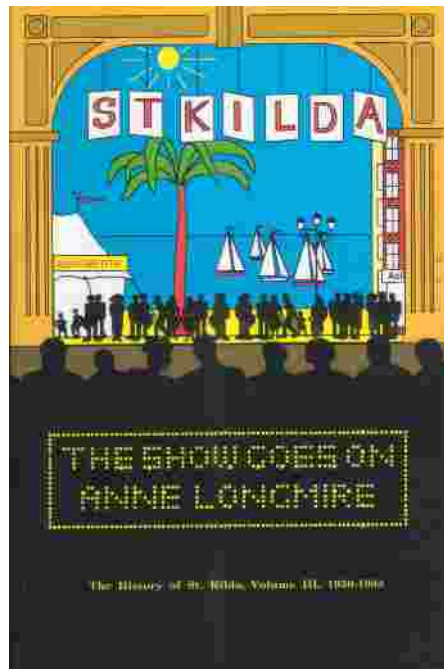

Background

St Kilda Council invited Anne Longmire — who was born in Horsham and graduated in History from the University of Melbourne in 1973 — to produce Volume 111 of the history of the municipality from 1930 to 1983.

Kilda Council had previously published The History of St. Kilda, Volumes I and II covering the period from 1840–1930.

Historian, James Butler Cooper*, also authored histories of Malvern and Prahran, researched and wrote the first two volumes published in 1931 by Printers Pty Ltd 27 Little Bourke St.

*During his career, J.B. Cooper contributed articles to the Argus, Truth and Bulletin. He passed away on March 24, 1951 at his home in Cochrane St Elsternwick.

Online Histories of St Kilda Volumes 1, 11, 111

The task of publishing Volumes 1 and 11 of The History of St Kilda by J.B. Cooper began in 2008.

SKHS commissioned John Hulskamp & Associates to develop and produce e-books that reflect the nature and style of the original histories and to make them fully text-searchable through the modern industry-standard Adobe PDF format as well as allow page turning so that readers can browse through.

To view the first two volumes, visit www.vcnet.net.au/~hsosk or <http://www.skhs.org.au/coopers.html> — accessible online since May 2009. Scroll down and you will find the page-turning approach by clicking on the HTML tag. You can find the searchable PDF files there too.

Volume 111 (available April 2010) completes the online history of St Kilda series on our website www.vcnet.net.au/~hsosk, online publications.

Jacka's Mob 14th Battalion

Extract from SKHS Online The History of St Kilda, Vol 11, pp247-249 www.vicnet.net.au/~hsosk and follow the prompts.

For the blessing of their colours on the St Kilda Foreshore, Dec 13, 1914, recruits of the 14th Battalion were conveyed from Broadmeadows training camp, in two special trains to St Kilda, and entertained at luncheon on the St. Kilda Cricket ground by the City of St. Kilda...

"... The Battalion's mascot, a fox terrier, was dressed in khaki, marked with the regimental number 14. What little could be seen of his tail, outside his rug was erect, so the dog was keeping his flag flying.

All that lay ahead of the Battalion was happily hidden. We knew nothing, at the end of the year, 1914, compared to the knowledge we afterwards attained, of what a nightmare of a world disjuncted it was in the war zone of slush, mud, gloom, fire, explosions, blood, misery and death.

...War regulations prevented the Battalion from taking the colours to the front, and in compliment to the Battalion padre, Rev. Andrew Gillison, prior to the Battalion's departure they were deposited in St. George's Presbyterian Church, East St. Kilda, and there remained for over 15 years.

At the instance of the 14th Battalion Association, the church authorities generously agreed to a suggestion made that they should hand over the colours to the St. Kilda Council, and such was done at the Anzac Memorial Service, held on Sunday, April 27, 1930.

The colours were emblazoned with the following battle honours:—"Pozières, 1917; Messines, 1917; Polygon Wood, 1918; Amiens, 1918; Landing at Anzac, 1915; Bullecourt, 1917; Ypres, 1917; Hamel, 1918; Hindenburg Line, 1918; Sari Bair, 1915."

Memorial for Albert Jacka, ANZAC HERO

Several SKHS members were present when Cr Rachel Powning (pic on left) opened the annual memorial service for Albert Jacka VC, 14th AIF Battalion and 1930-1932 Mayor of St Kilda at 2pm, January 17 at St Kilda Cemetery.

The banner of the 14th Battalion was held aloft as the ceremony took place after a catafalque party led by Australian Army Reservists marched from the main gates to Jacka's grave. They were followed by descendants of the Jacka Family and the 14th Battalion.

Federal Labor MP, the Hon. Michael Danby was present as was eminent historian, Geoffrey Blainey (Triumph of the Nomads).

Among those who laid wreaths and sheafs of flowers on Jacka's grave were: John Hulskamp, Vice President, St Kilda Historical Society and Kay Rowan, President, Friends of St Kilda Cemetery.

BLESSING OF THE COLORS 1914

Jacka, who was born in country Victoria, was among the new recruits gathered on the St Kilda foreshore (near the Triangle) on December 13, 1914 for the blessing of the 14th Battalion's colours (extract: column on left).

With the 13th, 15th and 16th Battalions, the 14th formed the 4th Brigade commanded by Colonel John Monash, and embarked for Egypt on Dec. 22.

Tribute to Raoul Wallenberg, CIVIC HERO

A small number of SKHS members attended the tribute to Raoul Wallenberg, the Swedish diplomat and valiant man, at St Kilda City Hall on January 17 at 11am.

Deputy Mayor, Cr Rachel Powning opened the solemn ceremony with a touching address to an audience mostly made up of wartime survivors and their families as well as those who venerate Wallenberg's courage in the face of state-endorsed terrorism.

Wallenberg risked his own life to save some 100,000 Hungarian Jews during WW11 and Shoah survivor Frank Vajda talked about his personal experiences. Susan Ginesy then related how Wallenberg was instrumental in her survival.

Against all the odds, Wallenberg not only issued false identity papers to Jewish people and arranged safe houses, and by doing so, he indirectly rescued many who, like Susan Ginesy, were destined for the NAZI death camps.

However, when the Soviet Communists (International Socialists) "liberated" Hungary from National Socialist totalitarianism in 1945, they took him into "protective custody" and Wallenberg was last seen alive on January 17, 1945.

Conflicting reports say that:- he died of a heart attack in 1947 while in custody; or he was tortured and shot or poisoned by Stalin's KGB, or sent to a Siberian gulag.

The search for what happened to him continues.

A memorial tree, plaque and reflection seat initiated by the local Wallenberg Committee and installed in Raoul Wallenberg's memory in the forecourt of St Kilda City Hall (pic on right) is inscribed with the Hebrew axiom: "Whoever saves one life saves the world".

"ANOTHER DIMENSION": Computing in Melbourne

A Self-Guided Tour of Melbourne's Silicon Mile, Fitzroy St & St Kilda Rd

SILICON CHIPS

During the Age of Aquarius while some St Kildans were spaced out on drink and drugs, sex and Rock-n Roll, other St Kildans were learning a new vocabulary and embracing the Cyber Age.

A number of international computer companies established offices and service bureaus — along the stretch of St Kilda Rd between St Kilda Junction and the Shrine of Remembrance, with a few in Fitzroy Street, St Kilda.

Self Guided Tour
Monash University's Graham Farr with colleagues Barbara Ainsworth, Chris Avram and Judy Sheard have put together a self-guided historical tour of the most notable Inner Melbourne companies and their locations.

They have kindly granted St Kilda Times permission to reproduce that part of their tour taking in St Kilda and St Kilda Rd to the Domain Interchange.

According to Graham Farr, "The tour is a chance to explore another dimension of Melbourne's history..."

FITZROY ST

Moving from south to north: you can see some of the sites from your tram or while walking along Fitzroy St towards St Kilda Road ...

161 Fitzroy St:
BURROUGHS, early 1960s. Burroughs had a close working relationship with Monash University Computer Centre which operated a number of Burroughs computers during the 1970s.

173 Fitzroy St:
IBM, early 1960s to late 1970s with a large ground floor window facing Fitzroy St.

217 Fitzroy St:
INTERDATA, late 1970s. Interdata was a division of Perkin Elmer Data and supplied 32-bit minicomputers.

ST KILDA RD

598 St Kilda Rd (cnr Lome St):
CONTROL DATA AUST (CDA), 1965-1982. The building still stands. It originally had five storeys. An extra storey was added and converted to apartments in the 1990s and is now 'Parklake Towers'.

574 St Kilda Rd:
UNISYS, 1980s. This is called the 'Unisys Centre' and houses an office of Novell.

568 St Kilda Rd:
ICT (later ICL), from 1962.

509 St Kilda Rd:
NCR data centre, 1960s.

*34 Queens Rd, (ctd col. 4)
FERRANTI, early 1960s
Cnr Hanna St, north side of the Albert Cricket Ground. See Note: Stanhill in Col 4

ST KILDA RD ctd

499 St Kilda Rd:
GENERAL AUTOMATION AUST. late 1970s. They sold micro-programmed 16-bit general purpose computers.

493 St Kilda Rd:
CONTROL DATA AUSTRALIA, 1982-89. CDA moved here from 598 St Kilda Rd

474 St Kilda Rd:
CONTROL DATA CORPORATION (CDC), early 1960s. The local arm of CDC became CDA. Its Australian Head Office was in Suite 16 (later, 17 and 18 too), Eton Square, at this address. CDA later leased 598 St Kilda Rd.

464 St Kilda Rd
VACC Building
DATA 100, 1970s.
Data 100 produced Remote Batch Terminals for use with various mainframe computers and other terminals

445 St Kilda Rd:
DIGITAL EQUIPMENT CORPORATION (DEC), from 1967. DEC introduced the successful PDP-8, generally regarded as the first minicomputer. The building that housed DEC here has long since been demolished.

412 St Kilda Rd
(Mayne Nickless bldg):
UNIVAC, late 1970s and 1980s.

400 St Kilda Rd (nr Domain Interchange):
HONEYWELL, from 1960s. (Ctd next col)

ORGANISED TOURS

From time to time Graham Farr and colleagues organises group tours to visit many of the places described here as well as several others. Visit www.csse.monash.edu.au/~gfarr/tour/

Tours are free apart from the cost of tram travel and refreshments... but bookings are essential as capacity is limited.

SKHS members who would like to join a future organised tour, register your interest at <https://secure.monash.edu/infotech/about/events/2009/computing-tour-form.html>.

CTD from col 3
HONEYWELL 400 St Kilda Rd in 1970, Honeywell's large ground floor window was destroyed by protesters who stopped outside during a march against the Vietnam War.

John Sheehan (Systems Manager there at the time) recalls that protesters threw Molotov cocktails, and then a shotgun blast hit the CPU of a time-sharing computer, fortunately missing an engineer who was working on it at the time. It took 9-12 months to fix.

The targeting of Honeywell may have been due to a combination of its American connections and its location at a convenient mid-way point between the start of the marches at Flinders St and their destination, the US Embassy [553] St Kilda Rd...

Stanhill 34 Queens Road (ctd from col 2)

Stanhill is a nine-storey building at 34 Queens Road, Melbourne (on the corner of Hanna St, near the Albert Cricket Ground and not far from Albert Park).

It was the site of the FERRANTI office in the 1960s, from which Monash University bought its first computer...

The office housed two Ferranti Sirius computers, making up what they called the Melbourne Computer Centre. There was another in Ascot Vale run by ICI, making four altogether in Melbourne at the time, from about 20 in all worldwide ...

The building is notable for its E.Romberg internationalist architecture (1948).
